Background

4. At the Committee's business planning day on 7 June the Committee discussed potential priorities to be factored into the Committee's work programme during the second year of Session 6.
5. The Committee's inquiry into the health and wellbeing of children and young people highlighted a significant decline in participation of girls in sport and physical activity as they reach adolescence with a potentially significant negative impact on their physical health and mental wellbeing. Based on these findings, the Committee agreed to undertake an inquiry into sport and physical activity, looking specifically at barriers to female participation.
6. A further discussion on 6 September resulted in the Committee agreeing that the inquiry should focus on female participation in sport and physical activity and the intersectionality of additional barriers to participation, such as ethnicity and disability.

7. It was agreed the inquiry would focus on participation at both a community and elite level and would consider issues around how female sport is supported, reported and promoted.

Structure of the inquiry

8. The Committee issued a call for evidence on 30 September 2022 which closed on 9 December 2022. The Committee received 220 responses which can be read here: Published responses for Inquiry into female participation in sport and physical activity - Scottish Parliament - Citizen Space.
